GRAYLING PAYS TRIBUTE TO DEAD

AMER. LEGION HAVE CHARGE OF SERVICES MEMORIAL DAY.

Memorial Day many people went joy riding and visiting while many remained at home and attended the services arranged by Grayling Post in tribute to the heroes of all wars. Although the weather was not as nice as usual there were quite a number out.

At 8:30 o'clock in the morning, the American Legion accompanied by the band went to Frederic to join the Frederic people in their services. Previous to going to the cemetery Rev. Hart of the M. P. church addressed the assemblage and spoke words of praise for Grayling Post for the part they took in the day's services. Most everyone in Frederic who was able to be out was present and the school children also joined in the line of march. After decorating the graves of deceased comrades the Legion paused at the last grave where they held their services. Following "The Star Spangled Banner" rendered by the Band Bugler Cripps sounded taps.

On the Post's return to Grayling they joined the various other patriotic organizations of this city and the school children at the W. R. C. hall to carry out their plans for the day.

At the head of the line of march was Carlton Wythe carrying the colors and Burt Shaw carrying the Post banner. At their sides were Victor Petersen, and George Thomson of Frederic who acted as color guards. Sergeant Herbert Smith, Jr., was in charge of the colors. Next in line was the Citizens band, following which came the firing squad, who were Lawrence Roberts, Leo Jorgenson, James Matthews and ----- Huey. Sergeant Will Laurant was in charge of the firing squad, and they as well as the color guards, color bearers and Sgt. Smith were all in uniform, which made a pretty sight and brought back memories of a few years back. Following the firing squad was A. C. Wilcox the only veteran of the Civil war able to be in the line of march. He rode in the Bates auto and those who took part felt highly honored to have him with them. The American Legion came next and on this occasion for the first time wore some fine new caps which bear the Legion emblem. Following the Legion came the W. R. C. ladies, then the L. N. L. and N. L. V. S. and the school children carrying American flags and flowers. Emil Giebling was in charge of the school children.

They marched first to the Cedar street bridge where the W. R. C. held their ritualistic services and cast flowers into the stream in honor of those heroes who died at sea.

The line was again formed at the bridge and marched up Cedar street to Michigan avenue, up Michigan avenue to Park street and then up Park street to the cemeteries.

When they arrived at the cemetery the L. N. L. and N. L. V. S. encircled the mound and held their ritualistic services, which were most impressive. Immediately following the American Legion gathered there and Post Commander Alfred Hanson read the service of the Legion, which was followed by a prayer recited by Chaplain Emil Giebling. At the conclusion of the prayer all heads were bowed for thirty seconds in silent tribute to those brave boys who gave their lives in the great cause. The band softly played the "Star Span-

VOTE ON STATE INCOME TAX

BIG EXCESS OF NAMES TO PETITION TO PUT ISSUE ON NOVEMBER BALLOT.

Michigan farmers have won the first skirmish in their battle to secure a state income tax to replace the general property tax in whole or in part as a means of raising revenue for state purposes. Word has been received from the Secretary of State that sufficient signatures have been filed to the initiatory petitions to insure the placing of the proposed constitutional amendment on the ballot for the November election.

The nearly sixty thousand names required were secured by joint efforts of the State Farm Bureau, the State Grange, and other farm and labor organizations. Leaders in the movement for this tax reform realize that the real fight is only just begun. Enemies of the proposal are becoming increasingly active and it is predicted that they will spend large sums to defeat the amendment and to see to it that the owners of farm and city real estate continue to bear the lion's share of the tax burden.

BIG COURTROOM SCENE IN "IF WINTER COMES"

The courtroom scene in the William Fox screen version of A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel, "If Winter Comes," which will be shown at the Opera House next Sunday and Monday, June 3 and 9, is one of the most impressive incidents in the book. The examination of the dazed and suffering Mark Sabre by the lawyer whom the author has given the nickname of "Humpo" wins instant sympathy for the sorely tried man.

The twisted, misshapen body of the little lawyer seems but the outward manifestation of his keen mind and relentless spirit as he bends all his energies to connecting Mark with the death of Effie Bright. Leslie King, who embodies this part in the picture, next and on this occasion for the first time wore some fine new caps which bear the Legion emblem. Following the Legion came the W. R. C. ladies, then the L. N. L. and N. L. V. S. and the school children carrying American flags and flowers. Emil Giebling was in charge of the school children.

They marched first to the Cedar street bridge where the W. R. C. held their ritualistic services and cast flowers into the stream in honor of those heroes who died at sea.

The line was again formed at the bridge and marched up Cedar street to Michigan avenue, up Michigan avenue to Park street and then up Park street to the cemeteries.

When they arrived at the cemetery the L. N. L. and N. L. V. S. encircled the mound and held their ritualistic services, which were most impressive. Immediately following the American Legion gathered there and Post Commander Alfred Hanson read the service of the Legion, which was followed by a prayer recited by Chaplain Emil Giebling. At the conclusion of the prayer all heads were bowed for thirty seconds in silent tribute to those brave boys who gave their lives in the great cause. The band softly played the "Star Spanglied Banner," after which the firing squad formed in line and fired three volleys. The closing was taps sounded by Bugler Russell Cripps.

Everything was carried out exactly in the manner it was planned and the various organizations should receive the highest praise for the efforts made and the excellent manner in which they chose to observe the Memorial day of 1924.

The local Post previous to Memorial day made the graves of departed comrades that rest in Grayling cemetery look trim and neat.

They wish to thank the members of the Legion and Messrs. M. A. Bates and Emil Kraus who donated their autos to take the ex-service men to Frederic.

60 CHILDREN VACCINATED TUES.

TOXIN-ANTI-TOXIN GIVEN AT SAME TIME TO 34.

Tuesday 60 children were vaccinated at the Grayling school and 34 took the toxin-anti-toxin. The next dose of toxin-anti-toxin will be given on Monday June 9th at the school. Vaccine may be given at the same time. The reason for giving it now is so that the arms may be watched by the nurse. If kept from infection and from being hit by anything there should be no trouble. There are very serious cases of smallpox in Detroit and Grayling is a summer resort town it is wise for her to protect herself by vaccination.

Not-withstanding the gossip and wild reports of the result of vaccination not one death can be proven to result from vaccination. They may result from infection or other disease contracted at the time. So your chance of death with vaccination is 0 to 100 in favor of smallpox.

Those who do not get vaccinated now take a chance of having smallpox and lose the chance of having the arms watched daily as the nurse will be away from town from the 17th to the 20th.

The vaccinations should have been done last week but the permission cards came in so slowly that arrangements could not be made. If the vaccination works satisfactorily the permission card will be certified and returned and may be kept to prove vaccination and the date.

PHYSICAL TRAINING DEMONSTRATION

SCHOOL PUPILS TO ENTERTAIN PUBLIC FRIDAY NIGHT.

Class In Sewing Will Also Exhibit Work.

The physical training classes of the schools will put on an exhibit Friday night, June 6, at the School gymnasium.

The program includes folk dances; relay races; story plays; aesthetic dance; indoor base ball game between the junior and senior high school girls; wand drill; clog dances; free drill exercises and May pole. All grades from the second to the senior class, both inclusive, will participate in the program.

This is sure to be a pleasing exhibit and should interest everyone who is in the least concerned in our children and our schools.

Besides the physical training demonstration, there will be an exhibit of some of the work done by the classes in sewing. Those who have never seen the things our young girls are doing in this department are due for a big surprise. Just come and see. You are going to be glad you attended.

INCOME TAX BILL HAS BECOME LAW

PRESIDENT'S SIGNATURE MAKES REVENUE ACT EFFECTIVE IN THIRTY DAYS

REDUCES INCOME LEVIES 25%

Cuts Tax on Autos and Accessories. Also on Theatre Tickets and "Luxury" Items.

Washington—The tax reduction bill has been signed by President Coolidge. Although the legislation does not accord with his stand for the Mellon plan, the president affixed his signature because he believed it represents an improvement over the existing law.

It reduces the levy of the federal government on almost every tax payer and especially benefits the man or woman with a small taxable income.

Effect of the measure is immediate in that it reduces by 25 per cent taxes on last year's incomes payable this year. More than a score of excise and miscellaneous taxes are repealed within 30 days, and the new scale of income and surtaxes affects incomes and revenues dating from last January 1.

The provision for a 25 per cent reduction in income taxes payable this year, contained in the new revenue law, may be put into effect by the tax payer immediately. Persons paying on the installment plan may cut their second payment, due June 15, by one-half and the last two installments by one-fourth each. Those who paid the full tax on March 15 will receive as soon as is possible a refund of one-fourth from the treasury without making application for it.

The following changes are ordered in the income taxes.

A 25 per cent reduction on taxes payable this year.

General revision of both the normal and surtax rate, amounting to a 50 per cent cut on taxes levied against incomes of $8,000 and under.

An additional reduction of 25 per cent may be made on earned incomes. For purposes of this reduction all incomes of $5,000 and under are defined as earned. The cut may be made only on incomes up to $10,000.

Exemption for heads of families with incomes of $5,000 and over is increased from $2,000 to $2,500, the same as now allowed heads of families with incomes of $5,000 and under. No change is made in the present law with an exemption of $1,000 for single persons.

The miscellaneous and excise taxes repealed and the amount of revenue involved are:

Telegraph and telephone messages, $4,000,000; beverages, $10,000,000; candy, $13,000,000; knives, dirks, daggers, etc., $30,000; livery, etc., $140,000; hunting, shooting and riding garments, $180,000; yachts and motor boats (sale), $319,000; carpets, rugs, trunks, purses, etc., $1,800,000; drafts and promissory notes, $2,150,000; theaters, shows, circuses (four space) $1,600,000.

In addition, numerous other excise taxes are reduced. Theater tickets of 50 cents and under are exempted; automobile trucks, the chassis of which sell for $1,000 or less, and bodies for $200 or less, are exempted from the 3 per cent tax, while the 5 per cent levy on auto tires, parts and accessories, is cut in half.

Articles selling for $30 or less and watches selling for $60 or less are exempted from the five per cent jewelry tax, as are also surgical and musical instruments, eyeglasses, spectacles, silver plated flatware, hardware and silver ware for use in religious services.

Taxes on playing cards was increased from eight to 10 cents a pack. The same brackets of amounts to which the estate tax is applied in the present law are retained, but the rates are increased so the maximum is 40 percent of amounts of $10,000,000 and over instead of 25 percent.

The normal tax rates on individual incomes are two per cent on incomes of $4,000 and under; four per cent on incomes between $4,000 and $8,000, and six per cent on incomes above that amount. The surtax rates range from one per cent on incomes between $10,000 and $14,000 to 40 per cent on incomes of over $500,000.

NEW LIGHT ON FRANKS SLAYERS

Confessed Murderers of Boy Linked With Other Crimes.

Chicago—Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb, the "push button kids," slayers of Robert Franks, 14-year-old school boy, have been accused with the slaying of Freeman Louis Tracey, whose body was found in the Chicago river recently.

Charles Ream, a chauffeur, also identified Richard Loeb as one of the two men who last fall kidnapped him and drove to a lonely spot on a prairie and performed an operation on him.

Leopold and Loeb with the mysterious death of Melvin L. Wolf, 24, who left his home April 7, to mail a letter and never returned. Many days later his body was fished from the lake.

WILDMAN RUBBER PLANT PROGRESSING RAPIDLY.

A letter from Secretary Jas. C. McCabe states that work is progressing rapidly on the power house for the Wildman Rubber Company plant, and the equipment is purchased and will be installed very soon.

It will be gratifying to the local stockholders to learn that the net assets of the Company are over a million dollars, according to the report of the Company, and that the policy adopted at the outset of keeping out of debt has been religiously lived up to, thus safe-guarding the interests of the stockholders.

They say that they are doing everything humanly possible to get the factory in operation by next fall.

"THE WAY OF A MAN WITH A MAID"

The trout fought gamely and strongly, but the young woman stuck to her work and would not give him any rest. Jack watched her carefully. He saw that she was tiring, but he did not offer any help, for he knew that she was a sportsman. She would want to win alone or not at all.

Yet he moved closer. The water was up to her hips, and no river in the Rockies has a swifter current than the Gunnison. The bottom, too, is covered with smooth slippery stones and boulders, so that a misspent might send her plunging down.

The thing that he had anticipated happened. Her foot slipped from its insecure rock hold and she stumbled. His arm was round her waist in an instant.

"Steady! Take your time."

"Thanks. I'm all right now." His right arm still girded her slight figure. The trout was tiring. Inch by inch she brought him nearer. Presently she panted. "My landing net."

It was caught in the creel. Kilmeny unfastened the net and brought it round where it would be ready for instant use.

"Tell me what I must do now."

"He's hooked pretty fast. Take your time about getting him into your net, and be careful then. These big fellows are likely to squirm away."

It was a ticklish moment when she let go of the rod with her left hand to slip the net under the trout, but she negotiated it in safety.

"Isn't he a whopper?" she cried in delight. "He won't go into the creel at all."

"Then let me have him. The glory is yours. I'll be your gillie to carry the game bag."

"I would never have got him if you hadn't been there to help me with advice. But I really did it all myself, didn't I? If you had touched the rod before I had him netted I'd never have forgiven you," she confessed, eyes glowing with the joy of her achievement.

"It's no joke to land one of these big fellows. I saw you were tired. But it's the sporting thing to play your own fish."

So here you have the hero and heroine of "The Highgrader"—Jack Kilmeny and Moya Dwight. Really, though, there are two heroines. This one is aristocratic Irish, dark, heartfree and with a temperament. The other is Joyce Seldon, blonde and a famous beauty. And there are two heroes, too—Jack Kilmeny, the American, and Capt. Ned Kilmeny, his Irish cousin. You see, Moya falls in love with Jack, but when Jack apparently turns out to be a highwayman she says "Yes" in a tentative sort of way to Captain Ned, who has loved her long. Now Jack isn't a highwayman, but he is a "highgrader." And that's pretty bad—many a bloody little war has been fought in the mining camps of the West. The highgrader is a miner who pockets pieces of unusually high-grade ore and sells them for his own profit. Cripple Creek, Goldfield and many other mining camps have seen exciting days brought about by highgrading. Worse still, Jack admits he's a highgrader and defends the practice on the ground that the miners do not get a fair share of the wealth they create, the dangers of mining being considered. Jack tries this line of talk with Moya, but she will have none of it. She may love him, but she does not love his trade.

William MacLeod Raine is the author. That is enough for his wide following—a guarantee of a good story in accord with the verities. For Raine lives in Colorado and knows what he's talking about when it comes to mining. He also knows his West and his many popular stories show his keen sense of colors and conditions, whether he writes of the cattle range or the mining camp. And he's a college man and a clever literary craftsman. So here's a story that is full of thrills—love, romance and adventure. It also contains entertainment, instructions, economics and ethics. Quite an unusual combination, this. But it's an unusual story, as are all of his novels of western life.

CHAPTER I

The Campers

Inside the cabin a man was baking biscuits and singing joyously, "It's a Long, Long way to Tipperary." Outside, another whistled softly to himself while he arranged his fishing tackle.

The cook, having put his biscuits in the oven, filled the doorway. He was a big, strong-set man, with a face of leather. Rolled-up sleeves showed knotted brown arms white to the wrists with flour.

"First call to dinner in the dining car," he boomed out in a heavy bass.

Two men lounging under a cottonwood beside the river showed signs of life. One of them was scarcely more than a boy, perhaps twenty, a pleasant amiable youth with a weak chin and eyes that held no steel. His companion was nearer forty than thirty, a hard-faced citizen who chewed tobacco and said little.

"Where you going to fish tonight, Crumbs?" the cook asked of the man busy with the tackle.

"Think I'll try up the river. Colter—start in above the Narrows and work down, mebbe. Where you going?"

"For the Meadows. I'm after the big fellows."

The man who had been called Crumbs put his rod against the side of the house and washed his hands in a tin pan resting on a stump. He was a slender young fellow with lean, muscular shoulders and the bloom of many desert suns on his cheeks and kinder velvety."

The fisherman shouted. Their mirth was hearty and uncontended.

"Go to it, Steve. Tell us some more," they demanded joyously.

Crumbs, generally the leader in all the camp fun, had not joined in the laughter. He had been drawing on his waders and buckling on his creel. Now he slipped the loop of the landing net over his head.

"We want a full bill of particulars, Steve. You go back and size up the eyes of the lady lord and the other female Britshers," ordered Curly gayly.

"Go your own self, kid. I ain't roundin' up trouble for no, babe just out of the cradle," retorted the grinning rider. "What's yore hurry, Crumbs?"

The young man addressed had started away but now turned. "No hurry, I reckon, but I'm going fishing."

Dinner finished, the fishermen lolled on the grass and smoked.

A man entered out of the patch of woods above and drew up at the cabin, disposing himself for leisurely gossip.

"Evening, gentlemen. Heard the latest?" He drew a match across his chaps and lit the cigarette he had rolled.

"Well, know after you've told us what it is," Colter suggested.

"The Gunnison country certainly is being honored, boys. A party of effete Britshers are staying at the Lodge. Got in last night. I seen them when they got off the train—me lad and me lady, three young ladies that grade up A1, a Johnnie boy with an eyeglass and another lad—who looks like one man from the ground up. Also, and moreover, there's a cook, a hawss wrangler, a hired girl to button the ladies up the back, and a valley chap to say 'Yes, sir, coming, sir,' to the cattle."

"Any names?" asked Colter.

"Names to burn," returned the na-you lads call him anything but Crumbs. I reckon that's a nickname."

Curly answered the question of the cowpuncher. "His name's Kilmeny—Jack Kilmeny. His folks used to live across the water. Maybe this Honorable Miss Kilmeny and her brother are some kin of his."

"You don't say!"

"Course I don't know about that. His dad came over here when he was a wild young 'cott. Got into some trouble at home, the way I heard it. Bought a ranch out here and married. His family was high moguls in England—or, maybe, it was Ireland. Anyhow, they didn't like Mrs. Kilmeny from the Bar Double C ranch."

The impassive gaze of the older man came back from the rushing river. "You know so much about it, Curly. I'll not butt in with any more misinformation," he answered with obvious sarcasm.

Curly flushed. "I'd ought to know. Jack's father and mine were friends, so's he and me."

"How come you to call him Crumbs?"

"That's a joke, Steve. Jack's no ordinary rip-roaring, hell-raising miner. He knows what's what. That's why we call him Crumbs—because he's fine bred. 'Pun, see. Fine bred—crumbs. Get it?"

"Sure I get it, kid. I ain't no Englishman. You don't need a two-hoof to pound a josh into my coconut," the rider remonstrated.

"You would have come and shot us up," she charged gayly.

Kilmeny laughed. "You're a good one, neighbor. But you don't need to worry." He let his eyes admire her lazily. "Young ladies are too seldom in this neck of the woods for the boys to hurt any. Give them a chance and they would be real good to you."

His audacity delighted Moya Dwight. "Do you think they would?"

"In our own barbaric way, of course."

"Do you ever scalp people?" she asked with innocent impudence.

"It's a young country," he explained genially.

"Has that reputation?"

"You've been reading stories about us," he charged. "Now we'll be on our good behavior just to show you."

"Thank you—if it isn't too hard."

Verinder, properly scandalized at this free give and take with a haphazard savage of the wilds, interrupted in the interest of propriety. "I'll not detain you any longer, my man. You may get at your fishing."

The westerner paid not the least attention to him. "My gracious, ma'am, we think we're a heap more civilized than England. We ain't got any militant suffragettes in this country—at least, I've never met up with any."

"They're a sign of civilization," the young woman laughed. "They prove we're still alive, even if we are asleep."

"We've got you beat there, then. All the women vote here. What's the matter with you staying and running for governor?"

"Could I—really?" she hemmed.

"Really and truly. Trouble with us is that we're so civilized we bend over backward with it. You're going to find us mighty tame. The melodramatic romance of the West is mostly in story books. What there was of it has gone out with the cowpuncher."

"What's a cowpuncher?"

"He rides the range after cattle."

"Oh—cowboy. But aren't there any cowboys?"

"They're getting seldom. The barb wire fence has put them out of business. Mostly they're working for the moving picture companies now," he smiled.

Mr. Verinder prefaced with a formal little cough a second attempt to drive away this very assiduous native. "As I was saying, Miss Dwight, I wouldn't mind going into parliament, you know, if it weren't for the ballyhoo members. I'm rather strong on speaking—that sort of thing, you know. Used to be a dab at it. But I couldn't stand the bouncers that get in nowadays. Really, I couldn't."

"Do you belong to the party camped below?" Inquired he of the rocking chair, one eyeglass fixed in the comely face.

The guilty man confessed.

"Then I want to know what the deuce you meant by kicking up such an infernal row last night. I couldn't sleep a wink for hours—not for hours, dash it. It's an outrage—a beastly outrage!"

The man with the monocle was snug with the self-satisfaction of his tribe. His thin hair was parted in the middle and a faint straw-colored mustache decorated his upper lip. Altogether, he might measure five feet five in his boots. The miner looked at him gravely. No faintest hint of humor came into the sea-blue eyes. They took in the dapper Britisher as if he had been a natural history specimen.

"So kindly tell them not to do it again," Dohanyas Verinder ordered in conclusion.

"If you please, sir," added the young woman quietly.

Kilmeny's steady gaze passed for the first time to her. He saw a slight dark girl with amazingly live eyes and a lift to the plump chin but untroubled; yet there was the mark of distinction in her throat and neck.

"What is it?" she asked.

"In its spirit—in the hope and the courage born of the wide plains and the clean hills—in its big democracy and its freedom from convention. The West is a condition of mind."

Moya Dwight was surprised. She had not expected a philosophy of this nature from her chance barbecuer. He had the hands of a working man, brown and sinewy but untroubled; yet he was the conquering male in headlong pursuit. Nor was he disturbed by the least suspicion of having been filled with the sensations and the impulses that she had contrived.

For a moment her deep pensive eyes rested in his. He felt a sudden intoxication of the senses. Almost with a swagger he drew up a chair and seated himself beside her. Already he was the conquering male in headlong pursuit. Nor was he disturbed by the least suspicion of having been filled with the sensations and the impulses that she had contrived.

Miss Seldon had that morning incidentally overheard Lady Farquhar tell her husband that Dohanyas Verinder's fortune must be nearer two million pounds than one million. It was the first intimation she had been given that he was such a tremendous catch.

All that remains are the mighty ruins, some are in cities down on the plains and others are cliff dwellings, where houses are built on the cliffs, and some were cave dwellings. One building at Pueblo Bonito, which is one of the earliest apartment houses, had four stories and covered a greater area than the capitol at Washington.

Today, remarks Adventure magazine, the traveler can see at one time the nomadic Indian, the pueblo dweller, the Spanish occupation and the present Anglo-American development.

Four stages of civilization have existed in New Mexico. The present or American; back of this the Spanish, which came with the Spaniards in 1540. When they came they found the civilization of the Pueblo Indian, with at least seventy villages, cultivated fields and extensive irrigation. Co-existent with them were a prehistoric race, living in well-built cities, with houses of stone, some of them four stories high, and they were cultivating irrigated fields. Their ditches and irrigated works were as well laid out as if run by modern engineers.

Well, what do you think of the hero and heroine? Do you think "Crumbs" a good nickname? And don't you just love Verinder?

Well, what's his last name? I ain't heard

"We didn't know anybody was at the Lodge," he explained.

"You wouldn't, of course," she nodded, and by way of explanation: "Lady Farquhar is rather nervous. Of course we don't want to interfere with your fun, but—"

"There will be no more fireworks at night. One of the boys had a birthday, and we were ventilating our enthusiasm. If we had known—"

"Kindly make sure it doesn't happen again, my good fellow," cut in Verinder.

"Kilmeny looked at him, then back at the girl. The dapper little man had been weighed and found wanting. Henceforth, Verinder was not on the map.

"Did you think we were Utes broke loose from the reservation? I reckon we were some noisy. When the boys get to going good they don't quite know when to stop."

The eyes of the young woman sparkled. The fisherman thought he had never seen a face more vivid. Such charm as it held was too irregular for beauty, but the spirit that broke through interested by reason of its hint of freedom. She might be a caged bird, but her wings beat for the open spaces.

"Were they going good last night?" she mocked prettily.

"Not real good, ma'am. You see, we had no town to shoot up, so we just punctured the scenery. If we had known you were here—"

"You would have come and shot us up," she charged gayly.

Kilmeny laughed. "You're a good one, neighbor. But you don't need to worry." He let his eyes admire her lazily. "Young ladies are too seldom in this neck of the woods for the boys to hurt any. Give them a chance and they would be real good to you."

"She knew that she ought to snub his excursion into the personal, but she was by nature unconventional."

"How do you know?" she demanded quickly.

"That's just a guess of mine," he smiled.

A musical voice called from within the house. "Have you seen my Graphic, Moya?"

A young woman stood in the doorway, a golden-white beauty with soft smiling eyes that showed a little surprise at sight of the fisherman. A faint murmur of apology for the interruption escaped her lips.

Kilmeny could not keep his eyes from her. What a superb young creature she was, what perfection in the animal grace of the long lines of the soft rounded body! Her movements had a light buoyancy that was charming. And where under heaven could a man hope to see anything lovelier than this pale face with its crown of burnished hair so lustrous and abundant?

Miss Dwight turned to her friend, "I haven't seen the Graphic, Joyce, dear."

"Isn't it in the billiard room? Thought I saw it there. I'll look," Verinder volunteered.

"Good of you," Miss Joyce nodded, her eyes on the stranger, who had turned to leave.

Kilmeny was going because he knew that he might easily overheat his welcome. He had puished Verinder, and that was enough. The miner had met too many like him not to know that the man belonged to the family of common or garden snob.

The westerner paid not the least attention to him. "My gracious, ma'am, we think we're a heap more civilized than England. We ain't got any militant suffragettes in this country—at least, I've never met up with any."

"They're a sign of civilization," the young woman laughed. "They prove we're still alive, even if we are asleep."

"We've got you beat there, then. All the women vote here. What's the matter with you staying and running for governor?"

"Good of you

FEVER OF INQUISITION.

Congressional investigation of executive activities began in an orderly enough fashion some months ago. But the Senate, upon which we have always looked as the steady old wheel horse of the Congressional team, evidently heard the distant drums of the approaching campaign, reared up and snorted and off it went, "Hell bent for election."

At every rough spot in the road some already terrified passenger was bumped off the political bandwagon, bag and baggage, often as greatly to the surprise of the drivers as to the victim when President Coolidge stepped to the center of the road and brought the runaway team to its haunches with the stiffest jerk on the reins the Senate has felt for years.

The President has little help from the ostensible Republican majority in Congress. His is a lonely fight. Tax reduction is menaced by a vote-chasing, classridden Congress that loves its $7500-a-year jobs with a love that passeth understanding—New York Post.

If our national law-makers would take the trouble to read their home state papers from the rural districts, they would see the unqualified demand for tax reduction and condemnation of the political tactics being employed in Washington in an effort to serve selfish interests preceding an election. Tax reduction should not be made a partisan political issue.

REPORT FOR SUNSHINE MISSION.

Meetings are going fine, Rev. Hatfield from Owosso, Michigan filled my appointments Saturday night, and Sunday, and is with me at Camp nine, Antrim Co., in an old time revival. Souls are finding God. Either myself or Rev. Hatfield will be at Grayling for over Sunday. Everybody welcome.

L. D. Kirby,
Pastor of Mission.

MAMMA SURPRISED AGAIN.

Marjory—"Mamma, were you at home when I was born?"

Mother—"No, darling, I was at grandma's, in the country."

"Wasn't you awful" surprised when you heard about it?"—The Triangle.

CHIROPRACTIC FIRST--NOT LAST

People are coming to realize that as CHIROPRACTIC can produce the results it does in Chronic cases of years standing it is worthy of a trial as a "first means rather than as a last resort in Acute cases. And they are not being disappointed; for results obtained in Acute cases taken at the onset are little short of miraculous. Make "Chiropractic First—not last," your Health Motto.

REV. E. B. WYLIE, ERSKINE CHURCH, OTTAWA, CAN., SAYS:

The motion picture of "If Winter Comes" is one of the greatest the industry has produced. In Mark Sabre the author has created as Christ-like a character as could be conceived in modern life. If Christ was here living today he would be regarded as a futile, simple fanatic much the same as modern criticism considered the central character in "If Winter Comes." Men who have been God-touched, like the character of Sabre in the book and on the screen, were the saviors of the world and in them faith in humanity was vindicated.

Michigan Happenings

To provide cherry growers of northern Michigan with constant information regarding crop conditions, 80 cherry growers in the vicinity of Benzieona have organized the Michigan Sweet Cherry Growers' Association. The object is to check and disseminate reports on market conditions. The association will do no selling. Headquarters will be in Beulah. Members will report crop prospects, sales and offers and daily shipments to the secretary for compilation and redistribution to members through the local co-operative associations. Members of the organization are from a number of western Michigan towns.

Charles J. DeLand, secretary of state, announces that petitions bearing more than the necessary number of names to place the proposed constitutional amendment providing for a state income tax on the ballot at the fall elections have been filed with him. Sixty thousand names were filed, while 55,000 were necessary. The proposal provides for the payment of taxes on incomes of $4,000 or more per year. The minimum is 5 per cent and the maximum 19 per cent. Incomes of $100,000 or more would pay the maximum tax.

Sophomore and junior forestry students at the Michigan Agricultural college are to spend four weeks on the property of the Johannesburg Manufacturing company of Johannesburg, Mich., this summer, as a part of their course. At the camp the students will gain first hand knowledge of practical lumbering operations from the time the trees are masked until they are loaded on cars for shipment, after being cut down, as the company owns a sawmill and much wooded property around the village.

The whining of a dog probably saved the lives of six persons when the farm home of J. W. Partridge, south of Battle Creek, was totally destroyed by flames. Mrs. Partridge was awakened by the dog and upon opening the bedroom door found the fire raging. While helping her husband and four children out of the house, she was thrown into the basement when the floor of the living room gave way. She escaped with slight injuries.

Monroe's Masonic bodies realized a dream when the formal opening of the Masonic Temple took place recently. Several years ago the Masons purchased the National Guard armory and since last September the work of remodeling has been under way. The building has been remodeled to suit their needs. The value of the building, grounds and equipment is estimated at $150,000.

A 15-foot fall from a step ladder on which he was standing in an attempt to put awnings on the second story windows of his home in Pontiac resulted fatally for Richard E. Cragg, 43 years old, assistant chief inspector of the Wilson Foundry and Machine company. He hit on his head, fracturing his skull, and died in a few minutes. He leaves his widow and two sons.

Frank C. Wood, 50 years old, of Port Huron, is dead from injuries suffered in the tunnel yards, when he was run down by a passenger train and both legs severed below the knees. Wood had accompanied his mother to the train which was to take her to Pearl Creek, N. Y., where his sister was dying. In jumping off the train he stumbled and fell under the wheels.

A million dollars is to be spent by Wayne County in replacing the bridge in Dix avenue over the River Rouge which was recently condemned by the War Department. Paul W. Voorhees, prosecuting attorney, has been requested to draw up a resolution for the appropriation. The War Department ordered that the new bridge be completed July 1, 1926.

Charles Sewell, 66, a farmer living three miles west of Ortonville, was drowned when he fell into an old well on the farm. His body was discovered by his wife. Sewell was subject to heart attacks and is believed to have fallen into the well while suffering a dizzy spell. He leaves a widow and three children.

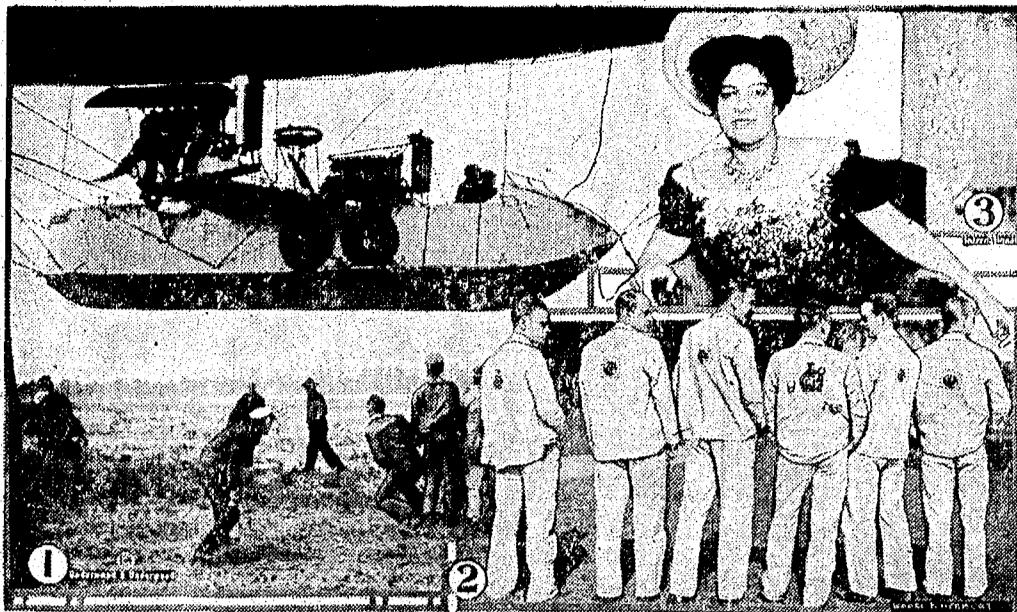

Alphonse R. Duboise, Flint contractor, was awarded a judgment of $92,637.95 against the defunct Commonwealth corporation in the Genesee circuit court, the largest award in the history of the county. The corporation failed to complete a building contract with Duboise.

Tax Reduction Bill Goes to the President—Immigration Measure Signed.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

UNLESS the prognosticators of Washington are wrong, the tax reduction bill will be a law before this reaches the reader. The conference report on the measure was accepted by the Senate by a vote of 60 to 6, and by the house by a vote of 376 to 9. Backed by these overwhelming majorities it went to the President, and congressional leaders were confident that Mr. Coolidge would sign it. First, of course, he asked the opinion of the Treasury department, whose experts analyzed the bill. It was said that Secretary Mellon had at no time advised the President to veto the measure and that he had come to the conclusion that it should be signed by him.

Still, expressing his objections to the exclusion of Japanese by law instead of by treaty, President Coolidge signed the immigration bill and it became a law. He justified his action by the general excellence of the bill and the imperative need of the legislation to take the place of the quota act of 1921, expiring on June 30. As to the Japanese exclusion, he said:

"I gladly recognize that the enactment of this provision does not imply any change in our sentiment of administration and cordial friendship for the Japanese people, a sentiment which has had, and will continue to have, abundant manifestation. The bill rather expresses the determination of the congress to exercise its prerogative in defining by legislation the control of immigration, instead of leaving it to international arrangements."

Over in Japan the signing of the bill, though no surprise, was the signal for great outbursts of indignation. A formal protest against the exclusion clauses was drafted, approved by the cabinet and cabled to Ambassador Huhara for presentation to Secretary Hughes. It is a dignified protest based on the alleged violation of an existing treaty with the United States—the gentlemen's agreement. In Tokyo and elsewhere there were big mass meetings at which the American law was denounced. At one of them Professor Uyesugi of the Imperial university concluded a fiery address with the words: "A storm is coming; prepare." Comments in the Japanese press are bitter and inflammatory pamphlets are numerous.

Al Smith's campaign managers have received information that the McAdoo forces in the Democratic convention, if and when their candidate fails to obtain the nomination, will fall back on Carter Glass of Virginia and try to put him across. This is somewhat alarming to the Smith cohorts, for they admit that Senator Glass would have great strength as a candidate. He was one of Woodrow Wilson's closest friends and his record, both as secretary of the treasury and as senator, is excellent. Among the McAdoo leaders who are said to favor Glass as second choice are Col. Edward M. House, Bernard Baruch and Thomas L. Chayhoun.

David L. Rockwell, general manager of the McAdoo campaign, announced that former United States Senator James D. Phelan of California will make the speech placing McAdoo in nomination. Four years ago in San Francisco he presented the name of Edward L. Doheny for the vice presidential nomination. His selection now is regarded as a move to offset rumors linking McAdoo with the Ku Klux Klan. Mr. Phelan is one of the leading Roman Catholics of the Pacific coast.

AIDS DISABLED MEN AND THEIR FRIENDS

A ministering angel is actually thought of as a Red Cross nurse, a Sister of Mercy, or some woman who gives unsung service. But in J. G. Jeckering, a Knight of Columbus secretary at the National Military home in Dayton, Ohio, disabled veterans of the World war believe they have found the male variety.

Jeckering, who was a sergeant-major of artillery during the World war, took up K. of C. work almost immediately following his return from service. Much of that time he has been stationed at the Dayton home, where scores of World war soldiers are now receiving care.

His work daily brings him to the bedside of disabled men, to whom he administers comforts and performs the little duties that mean so much to the disabled man. In addition to these duties, Jeckering finds time to visit the unfortunate veterans in jails and penitentiaries, looking after the burials and funeral arrangements of those who die away from home, and cheering the bereaved ones by comforting words as to their loved ones and their last moments.

In district work for the American Legion, Jeckering takes a prominent part. He is a member of the Legion welfare committee of the state, and is serving a term on district Americanization committee.

When the Knights of Columbus in Dayton recently unveiled a memorial tablet to World war veterans, as a World war memorial in that city, National Commander John R. Quinn of the American Legion was present to deliver the principal address. He was secured principally through the efforts of Jeckering, who handled many of the arrangements for the unveiling cere-

Interesting Relics in Pennsy. Post Library

The library of the Frankfort (Pa.) post of the American Legion is one of the most interesting collections to be found in the state. More than 1,400 books are available. But the historical relics of the post are of principal interest. The first American flag to go over the top during the World war, presented to the post by Edward Holden, honorary colonel of the One Hundred and Sixty-eighth infantry battalion of Woodstock, Canada is one of the prized possessions. Other valuable relics are an American ambulance flag, used in Italy during the war, a flag that was used in the centennial celebration in Philadelphia in 1876, and a Texas state flag captured at the battle of Gettysburg.

A secret committee to investigate activities of alleged radicals has been appointed from members of the Wyandotte post of the American Legion in Kansas City, Mo., post officials say. The committee is the result of activity of certain elements in Kansas City, Kan., and press reports of a national movement for pacifism.

Variety in Tailored Suits; Coat and Frock for Little Girl

THE regulation tailored suit led the procession when new styles for spring and summer made their entry, and it found a world of women waiting to applaud its coming. All the tailored modes received a royal welcome, for American women are convinced that there is nothing more becoming to them, and they are right. "Give them what they want" is a profitable slogan for stylists, and straightway they began giving us variations of the tailored suit, and now we have street suits, sports suits, semi-sports suits, formal suits and suits that can be managed or less formal. Many variations are sold in the dressier suits and considerable attention is given to Lanvin green. Soutache braid to match is often used in bandings on coats and as a decoration for collars and cuffs. Borders of cartridge plaids, fastened down with heavy embroidery silk, is a novel informer. Just as beautiful as any in colors are the two-piece suits of black satin that are so sure of a welcome.

In the matter of children's clothes those who undertake to make them at home are wise when they choose to be copyists. So far as designing them goes it is best to leave it to professionals whose talent has made it worth their while to give all their time to this work—for there is nothing they have overlooked in the direction of beauty, or convenience, or durability.

As an example of simple and casual style in a two-piece suit, the model at the right of the two pictured challenges comparison. The designer has taken a barred flannel and made it into a straight up-and-down skirt, and a coat (or what passes for a coat) that is equally uncompromising as to line. The opening at the front leaves us in doubt as to whether he had in mind a blouse or not. This overgarment does the work of both blouse and coat. The plain collar and cuffs, of crepe de chine, and the walking stick bespeak a boyish style which is an approved phase of the tailored mode.

There is considerable economy in making light summer coats and nearly all frocks that involve handwork at home. Heavier coats, like that shown in the picture, require more expert work than that of the average needlewoman. But summer coats of camisole hair, flannel, crepe and other materials are cut on simpler lines and are not difficult to make.

For little girls of three years and upward coats with shoulder yokes are

For Little Miss Four-and-a-half

A modest example of the mode in formal suits appears at the left of the picture. Fashion inclines to the heavy silk crepe weaves for suits of this kind and finds the Chinese coat adopted to embroideries, which are usually done in self-color. But satin in two-piece suits with straight box coats and plain skirts is a new arrival that has met with nothing that outclasses it. In the light brown shades it is superb.

Narrow silk braid is used for adornment and scarfs to match add to the fashions of the satin suit.

No conscientious reporter of tailored styles can fail to mention the beautifully finished twill suits in beige and tan, made with long coats, that so many women have selected. They hang in the semi-formal squad and are very adaptable. Hats and other accessories easily place them in the formal category.

Match Cape and Hat to Frock

The girl who has clever fingers will be able at little cost to include any number in her summer wardrobe. By using wide ribbon, either plaid or in brilliant Roman stripes, and heavily fringing the ends one has a scarf that is smart enough for any purpose and not at all expensive.

Scarsf and Still More Scarfs

Scarfs play such an important part in the fashions of the moment that one must have a large supply on hand.

Summer Find You Miserable?

It's hard to do one's work when every day brings morning lameness, throbbing backache, and a dull, tired feeling. If you suffer this, why not take Doan's Pills? Little pills for kidneys. Headaches, dizziness and kidney irregularities may give further proof that your kidneys need help. Don't risk neglect! Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Thousands have been helped by Doan's. They should help you. Ask your neighbor!

A Michigan Case

Mrs. Thomas Dunn, Gladwin, Mich., says: "I had an attack of kidney complaint and I suffered greatly with pains in the small of my back and through my side. Sharp, shooting pains darted through my side and the pains in the small of my back were dull and nagging. Doan's Pills cured me of the trouble."

Proud of Tame Muskrat
Many visitors are being received at Lock No. 4 of the Barge canal in Waterloo, N. Y., to see the pet of the lock operators. It's name is Charley and he is a tame muskrat. He will answer to his name and come swimming from whatever part of the lock he is at that time, to the lock wall after the morsel of food he knows is waiting for him. Charley's diet consists of apples and corn.

MORE FORESTS BURNED THAN CUT.

Government figures show that in agencies depleting our forests, the ratio of burning to cutting is nearly two to one.

During 1923, there were 51,891 forest fires in United States, burning an aggregate area of 11,500,000 acres with a financial loss in excess of $16,500,000.

Some idea of the extent of this ravaged area may be gathered from the fact that it is eight times the acreage of French forests destroyed or damaged throughout the world.

War—and this, too, in one year.

Only 28 states are making definite efforts to protect their forest lands aggregating 16,000,000 acres, from fire. From July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1923, they expended $1,826,430 for this purpose. This is only a little more than a cent an acre and not enough to weigh heavily on any taxpayer.

For the construction of 1,367 miles of class "B", 9 ft. gravel road in Crawford County, Michigan.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Board of County Road Commissioners of Crawford County, Michigan, at their office in the Court House at Grayling, Michigan until 1:00 p. m. Monday, the 16th day of June, 1924, for the construction of 1,367 miles of class "B", 9 foot gravel road, located as follows:

Beginning at a point 460 ft. N. 88 degrees 00 ft. W. of the approximate section corner common to sections 25-26 and 35-36 T. 28 N. R. 3 W.; thence S. 88 degrees 00 ft. E. 460 ft.; thence N. 1 degree, 00 ft. E. 1438.8 ft.; thence N. 82 degrees 25 ft. E. 4869.1 ft.; thence S. 61 degrees, 43 ft. E. 558.2 ft. to point of ending, said point of ending being on the town line between section 25 T. 28 N. R. 3 W. and section 30 T. 28 N. R. 2 W., being in all 1,367 miles.

The work will consist of shaping the road and graveling according to the specifications thereof.

Plans may be examined and instructions to bidders, specifications and proposal blanks may be obtained at the office of said Board of County Road Commissioners at Grayling, Michigan. Plans will be furnished upon the receipt of five dollars ($5) per set, which will be refunded upon their safe return.

A certified check in the sum of two hundred fifty ($250.00) dollars made payable to the Board of County Road Commissioners of Crawford County must accompany each proposal of this road.

The right to reject any and all bids is reserved.

The Studebaker Light-Six!

More are sold than of any other six in the thousand-dollar price class!

More because—it is the sweetest, smoothest-running Six you ever drove. Its specially designed offset valve motor, its machined crankshaft, its four big crankshaft bearings, its perfectly precisioned cylinders, pistons and reciprocating parts are the reason.

More because—no other car in its price class shows such obvious indications of quality—genuine leather upholstery, a hand-tailored top and curtains, carefully selected details of equipment, lustrous baked enamel finish.

More because—its 40-horsepower motor, its correct gear ratio, its beautiful balance and low center of gravity, make it like lightning in the "get-away," never failing on a hill, and effortless under a full load on any reasonable road.

More because—it is backed by a great service organization, immediately and willingly accessible.

More because—its recognized used car value protects you with the lowest possible depreciation when you come to trade it in.

To prove its goodness by performance we will lend you a Light-Six any day this week—come in and ask for it.

TO HELP LATE CORN PLANTING

June 4, 1924.

Mr. O. P. Schumann,
Editor Avalanche,
Grayling, Mich.

Dear Mr. Schumann:

On account of the very backward spring it is going to be a close shave to get corn ripened in this region.

There is a way to overcome this condition, and wide-awake farmers will use it. It is by use of fertilizer. It is well known that the right amount of the right commercial fertilizer will not only make a crop grow larger; but will also hasten maturity or date of ripening. It would be good farm management and good business practice for farmers, whose corn is not planted, to sow two bags of acid phosphate on plowed ground and drag in. If corn is planted, sow the phosphate just the same, cultivate in by the marks by which corn was planted, then drag at right angles with spike-tooth drag with teeth slanted back half way. This last method can be used even if corn is several inches high, and will get rid of lots of weeds.

We have five tons of acid phosphate in the Cooperative Warehouse (farmers warehouse) in Grayling, which we will sell in any quantity to anyone, whether member of the Cooperative or not, as we wish to get our farmers accustomed to using this very valuable form of fertilizer. The soil in this and surrounding counties is so lacking in acid phosphate that all would get more out of their work if they used liberal amounts of acid phosphate with each crop each year.

Farmers wishing phosphate should see me.
